Heading Into Winter

At this time of year, it's nice to get inside, cozy up to a fireplace, take a soak in a hot tub, and alternate between sauna and swimming pool. That's just what we do when we meet at the New Hampshire Mountain Inn in Wilmot (near the center of the state).

Our first event there this year took place in November, and we'll be returning in December, February, and April. Innkeeper Patrick always has a gourmet meal to serve at the end of our afternoon swim/social, and he didn't let a broken leg from a fall off a ladder keep him down — November's pork medallions and salmon dish were so good, some folks descended on the kitchen to get the recipes.

December, of course, is a time for Yankee Swaps, and we'll be holding one at 4 p.m. on Dec. 17, midway through our holiday celebration. We set no price minimums or maximums, so the gifts can range from cheap joke gifts to wonderful keepsake items — or gifts that get recycled from year to year (whatever happened to that backgammon set?).

This month is special to Naturist New Hampshire, marking the end of our 25th year as a club. Hope to see some old friends as well as new ones coming to help us celebrate.

Naked Movie Matinee?

We're still holding out hope for an opportunity to hold a naked movie matinee in January. We've been working our way through a list of movie theatres that could accommodate us, but while some event coordinators say they'd love to play host to such an event, their bosses balk at the idea of naked people, falling back on the "No shirt, no shoes, no service" policy. (Funny, they never say anything about "no pants".)

As of this writing, we're waiting to hear back from a Central New Hampshire venue, having been turned down by others throughout the state. I had a tip about a great possibility in Ogunquit, Maine, but it appears to be closed for the season, and didn't return my email inquiry.

So January is up in the air right now, but we'll announce it as soon as we've found something.
